Seven New Saints for the Church

Peter To Rot, the first indigenous saint from Papua New Guinea, was a lay catechist who was martyred in 1945 by the occupying Japanese for refusing to give up his ministry.

Venezuela's first saints are María del Carmen Rendiles Martínez, a nun and founder of the Sister Slaves of Jesus and the 19th-century lay physician Dr.

José Gregorio Hernández

Cisneros. José Gregorio, popularly known as the "doctor of the poor," devoted his life to providing good medical care to the indigent and was deeply involved in caring for victims of the 1918 influenza.

For the Venezuelan people forced to live a long while under an oppressive government and now probably an illegitimate regime, these canonizations are cause for rejoicing.

For stories about the other four saints canonized on October 19, see the National Catholic Register article.

IRMAS

"The documentary, IRMAS—Sisters in Portuguese—was created to honor the Sisters of Mary and their life-changing work...The film follows the Sisters as they reach out to the poorest children...[you will] see the desperate poverty the children come from, and meet children whose lives have been transformed by hope."
